

Junior Research Scholar

Jr. Researcher/Analyst - Globalization, Int'l Business

New York University: NYU - Domestic: Leonard N. Stern School of Business: Center for the Globalization of Education & Management (CGEM)

Location

New York, NY

Open Date

Feb 21, 2020

Description

Role : The NYU Stern Center for the Globalization of Education and Management (CGEM) is recruiting a full-time researcher to assist with the center's research activities: from gathering background research to preparing and analyzing datasets to writing up research findings and summarizing them in presentation slides. Successful candidates will combine excellent research, analysis and writing skills with a proactive approach to delivering quality results even under time constraints. The position will involve a mix of short- and long-term research projects on globalization, business strategy, and international economics.

About CGEM : This research center aims to house the academic world's most comprehensive base of knowledge on interactions that take place between countries and their implications for business and public policy. The center produces a variety of research outputs tailored to its various audiences: teaching content for educators, practitioner-oriented publications for business executives and policymakers, as well as academic publications for the research community. Interdisciplinary approaches and engagement with practitioners are emphasized as sources of novel insights that help address real world challenges.
