Empirical Corporate Finance

CRN: 20574
Course Number: 676
Department (unused): ECON

Description:
This course, taught in the second half of the term, provides an overview of the modern empirical toolkit that is used in corporate finance. We cover a variety of reduced-form empirical methods, with applications to selected topics at the frontier of corporate finance empirical research. Economics Ph.D. students need to take both this course and Theoretical Corporate Finance (ECON 677/MGMT 742) to obtain credit; then, together, they will be counted as one credit.
