The Political Economy of Migration

Subject Code (deprecated): ECON
Course Number: 483
Section Number: 01
Description:
Immigration flows are a defining political concern throughout the world, and internal migration is reshaping the political and economic landscape of the developing world. This class aims to bring students to the forefront of political and economic research on migration, with a specific focus on the region of South Asia. Studying the political aspects of migration involves engaging with formal models on the incentives of governments to facilitate or stymie internal and international movement. Studying the economic aspects of migration requires learning about the economic theories underlying location choice. Students continue with the studying of the role that infrastructure plays in regulating movement.

Instructor(s) from Econ Site: Zack Barnett-Howell
Instructor Name from WEN: Zack Barnett-Howell
Meeting Pattern (deprecated): M 9.25-11.15
Term Code: 202101
Category from Feed: International
Political Economy
Senior Seminar: SEMINARS
Preregistration Meetings:
Tuesday, December 8, 2020, 12:00 - 1:00 pm EST

https://yale.zoom.us/my/zackbh

Monday, December 14, 2020, 10:00 am - 12:00 pm EST

https://yale.zoom.us/my/zackbh

Prerequisite from Feed:
Prerequisites: A course in econometrics/statistics and intermediate macroeconomics.

Source URL: https://economics.yale.edu/undergraduate/courses/483/202101