This course examines some major issues and events in the economic growth and development of selected countries in Latin America during the 19th and 20th centuries. Emphasis is on the institutions and other historical factors that have affected the relative long-run performance of Latin American countries and their implications for understanding economic development.

Source URL: https://economics.yale.edu/courses/econ-582a-economic-history-latin-america