INDUSTRY

Ana (Annie) de Lezica
Ana is an Argentine Yalie from the Class of 2019 who double majored in Economics and Film & Media Studies. She interned at J.P. Morgan after her junior year and joined as a full-time Analyst after graduating, working in Corporate Equity Derivatives (a hybrid desk of Sales & Trading and Investment Banking). After a year of working at JPM, Annie transitioned to a tech start-up called Coursedog, which provides class scheduling and curriculum management solutions to universities across the country. Having experienced diametrically different working environments has been exciting and given Annie perspective on which type of culture she excels in, and she is thrilled to be a resource to anyone exploring similar questions as part of their career search.

Jessica Michaels
Jessica Michaels graduated from Yale in 2018 with a degree in Economics. She is currently an associate at Blackstone Group.

Glodie Mulunda
Glodie Mujinga Mulunda is an associate consultant at IBM in the Federal Sector. She earned her bachelor’s degree in Economics from Yale University (BF '19). She guided her major towards economic development and international economics; and conducted research to analyze the relationship between women's empowerment and economic development. While at Yale, she was involved with Yale Chi Alpha, Assistive Labs at Yale, and briefly with Yale Women in Economics. She is really interested in the intersection between people, technology, policies, and its potential to promote economic development.
